Why design?
The Graphic Design BFA program at the Hite Art Institute stresses the thinking behind visual communication and design, not just the making of design artifacts. While artifacts — whether print or digital, static or interactive — are the typical end product of a graphic design assignment, the appropriateness and success of the solution relies on solid design thinking and process.

The tools and technology designers use to implement their solutions change constantly, but the foundation of design thinking is as important today as it was 40 years ago and will be 40 years from now. We emphasize design problem solving through a process that involves problem definition, research, exploration, selection, composition, refinement, implementation, and evaluation.

Our selective-admissions program admits approximately 20 students per year. Students apply at the end of the Foundation Design Methods course (spring first year). Admission is determined by the graphic design faculty based on a review of their work shown in their Design Methods Process Journal (or a portfolio for transfer students), their academic record, and recommendations of other faculty members.

Our curriculum
As part of the College of Arts & Sciences, our students benefit from the breadth of a liberal arts education providing knowledge and additional perspectives, combined with the depth through at least 12 graphic design courses that prepare them for many potential paths in the design profession.

In addition to foundation art courses, studio and art history requirements, the required graphic design curriculum includes:

» Foundation Design Methods
» History and Issues of Graphic Design
» Introduction to Graphic Design
» Typography I
» Typography II
» Web Design
» Book Forms
» Identity Systems
» Design for Public Issues
» Portfolio

Students also take two graphic design electives from our carousel courses, which are typically offered every other year. Those include:

» Adventures in Design: Methods + Process
» Data Visualization
» Design & Meaning (Visual Semiotics)
» Design for Interaction
» Lettering and Font Design
» Packaging Design
» Wayfinding & Environmental Graphic Design

Students interested in advertising are encouraged to take Creativity in Advertising, where they will work on teams with Communication majors.
Internships

The majority of our students participate in design internships, providing valuable real-world experience before graduation. Almost all of the internships are paid—a welcome supplement to students’ income that helps with their undergraduate expenses. Many students have multiple internship experiences; the average number of semesters in an internship is currently more than five.

Alumni Salary Survey

Our 2018 alumni salary survey (primarily graduates from the past 15 years, 2003–2017) provided great data for how our alums are doing professionally. 55 alums working in design and related fields completed the survey. Here’s a few of the highlights.

What’s your annual compensation?

To calculate averages, the midpoint in each salary range was used; for $100,000 and up, an estimate of $112,500 was used.

Mid-Century Living Room Collection

A quirky, mid-century modern-styled pattern collection. This collection features vector-illustrated living room furniture reminiscent of the 1950s era. The color palette and drawing style of this collection will surely stir up some nostalgia of classic mid-century modern furniture design, architecture and graphic design.

Design for Public Issues = Community Engagement + Service Learning

Each fall, seniors spend the semester working a design team with a local non-profit organization to create a full brand identity that the organization can implement. This year’s class worked with Kentucky Science & Technology Corporation (KSTC), the Mike Olsen Foundation, Neighborhood House, and Project Warm.

Estimated value of the work performed by the students team (assuming a $50/hour non-profit billing rate) is $135,000.
