

PORTLAND ANCHOR

Louisville's Oldest Neighborhood Newspaper"

Vol. 44, No. 3

March, 2016

join us for an easter egg hunt

Annual Community Easter Egg Hunt

Submitted by Steve Trout; American Legion, Shawnee Post 193

...true! This will be our 5th annual Easter Egg hunt for the kids in our neighborhood. The previous 4 hunts have managed to have spectacular weather and excited kids. The event has continued to grow and we are proud of that. We are proud of the support that we have received from many different groups and organizations in our community. We are especially grateful of our association with the Good Shepherd Catholic Parish; they are a true partner in making this happen. There are other sponsors involved as well and we will provide a list and a thank you in the next edition of the Portland Anchor. Below will list the activities as we see them now:

Location: Good Shepherd Catholic Parish
3511 Rudd Avenue
Louisville, KY 40212

Saturday March 26th, 2016

Easter Bunny will be delivered by the 40 & 8 Train at approximately 10:00 AM. The kids will have an opportunity to meet the big furry Easter Bunny and take pictures.

Starts: Approximately 11:00 AM with (2) age groups.

Infants to 4 year olds

5 year to 10 year olds

Refreshments, door prizes and social time will immediately follow the hunt in the Church's cafeteria.

Easter Party

Saturday March 26th

11:30 am – 1:30pm

Lunch Easter Crafts

Easter Story Teller

Easter Egg Hunt

Picture with Easter Bunny

For Children under 12 years old

R.S.V.P by March 23, 2016

Event Center 1831 Baird Street - 776-2635

UofL to lease, renovate Portland warehouse space for fine arts

LOUISVILLE, Ky. -- The University of Louisville plans to house its master of fine arts program studios in renovated Portland warehouse space near a growing community of arts-related businesses and organizations.

The University of Louisville Foundation will lease 27,000 square feet, which is about a third of the vacant two-story brick building at 1606 Rowan St., for 10 years from Rowan Downstream LLC. Interior renovations will revamp the first floor and second-floor mezzanine, with completion planned by the spring 2017 semester. The 1880s building formerly served as a floor-covering distribution business, storage warehouse and a senior nutrition center, among other uses.

"We are proud to be a university tied closely to its larger community, and this expansion into western Louisville's revitalization is another example of how we all benefit from working together," President James Ramsey said.

UofL's MFA degree in studio arts and design was approved and launched in 2014. The 60-credit-hour program is intended to be selective, rigorous and professional with small classes to ensure participants have substantial access to studios and faculty members. MFA students can participate in a variety of media, moving across disciplines, or focus on one area.

Courses include ceramics, drawing, fiber, glass, painting, printmaking, sculpture, design, mixed media, book arts and interior architecture.

"The location in the historic Portland neighborhood will not only provide MFA students and our studio art faculty members with a 'home' but it also will extend our university's presence in west Louisville," said Kimberly Kempf-Leonard, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. "So this is not just about a new space for us. It's about giving our faculty and students a way to infuse community into their art and art into the community."

Rowan Downstream's partners include Gill Holland, a developer noted for leading revitalization efforts in Louisville's NuLu and Portland neighborhoods. Other Rowan partners are Jacob Brown and Justin Brown, both of The Marian Group, Chad Middendorf,

(Continued on Page 12)

Deadline for Next Issue: MARCH 18

Look For Your Next Issue: March 25 – March 30