Peters Named JRME Outstanding Reviewer

Dr. Susan Peters, Associate Professor in the Department of Middle and Secondary Education, was selected as one of the 2016 Outstanding Reviewers for the Journal of Research in Mathematics Education (JRME). She was recognized for her outstanding reviews of more than one manuscript. JRME is considered one of the top research journals in mathematics education. Dr. Peters has also been invited to serve as an associate editor on the editorial board for the Statistics Education Research Journal (SERJ), which is the top research journal in statistics education.

Mark Publishes Article

Dr. Sheron Mark, Assistant Professor in the Department of Middle and Secondary Education, published, "A bit of both science and economics: A non-traditional STEM identity narrative," in Cultural Studies of Science Education. The article discusses the results of a study that focuses on one African American male who expressed high-achieving STEM career goals and how he developed a STEM identity. Read more...

Foster Editor for Special Edition of JCP

Dr. Gene Foster, Clinical Associate Professor in the Department of Educational and Counseling Psychology, is serving as guest editor for a special edition of the Journal of Clinical Psychology (JCP) that will be devoted to tele-psychology. Dr. Foster also published in JCP an article on behavioral health titled, "Tele-behavioral health in schools: Improving access to child psychiatry services in an underserved urban community." The special issue will be published in spring 2018. In addition, he has been asked to assist with a proposal to present on the same tele-behavioral health at the American Psychological Association (APA) conference in 2018, which will be held in San Francisco, CA.

Buecker to Serve on ETS Panel

Dr. Harrie Buecker, Liaison for School and District Partnerships, has been invited to serve on a Educational Testing Service's (ETS) multi-state standard setting panel for a series of educational leadership licensure tests used in Kentucky and other states. The panel will meet for two days in Princeton, NJ in January, 2018. Participants will review the assessments, provide independent judgements, and engage in panel-wide discussions about the tests, their content, and the minimum scores needed to become licensed as a school leader.

Presley to Speak at University of North Texas

Gin Presley, Instructor in the Department of Health and Sport Sciences, was invited to speak at the University of North Texas Journalism School Hackathon in late October. Presley discussed the sport topics related to the start-up market place such as what's working, what isn't, and where there are opportunities. She also served as a judge for 'dream teams' of students that were tasked with creating a startup. Judges provided expertise and guidance to each team and assisted the students in developing their projects. Learn more...

CEHD Ft. Knox Program on Jeopardy!

UofL was recently a "question" to an "answer" on the game show Jeopardy! in a category about ACC schools. The clue/answer was, "Some courses for the university of this city are taught at Fort Knox Army Base." And the question/answer was, "What is the University of Louisville?" The CEHD's Department of Educational Leadership, Evaluation and Organizational Development offers classes for active duty military personnel who may complete a degree in B.S. in Organizational Leadership and Learning or an M.A. in Higher Education Administration from anywhere in the world.

Hopkins Hosts IVLP Group

Dr. Katy Hopkins, Assistant Clinical Professor and Director of the Cardinal Success Program in the Department of Educational and Counseling Psychology (ECPY), hosted at the Cardinal Success Program (CSP) at The Academy @ Shawnee a delegation of university counselors and psychologists from Bangladesh. The group was visiting through the U.S. Department of State's International Visitor Leadership Program (IVLP). They discussed learning methods and concepts being taught to future counselors in ECPY regarding youth violence prevention. The delegation learned about targeted prevention and intervention services, and CSP's mission to remove barriers to access quality mental health care for underserved communities.

LWP Featured in National Report

Jean Wolph, Director of the Louisville Writing Project (LWP) and Instructor in the Department of Middle and Secondary Education, along with Sandra Hogue, Jefferson County Public Schools (JCPS) elementary teacher, and Peter Reed, JCPS high school teacher, were among those featured in the National Writing Project's (NWP) Annual report. NWP included them due to their powerful and ongoing contributions at both the local and national levels. See the full report... Peter's story... Sandra's story...

Chisholm Awarded NCTE Grant

Dr. James Chisholm, Associate Professor in the Department of Middle and Secondary Education, and Alison Heron-Hruby, Morehead State University, received a Conference on English Education research grant from the National Council of Teachers of English (NCTE). Their project examines how online platforms for sharing drafts of writing inform teacher candidates' approaches to providing feedback to diverse high school writers. The study stems from research calling for more attention to pre-service preparation in the teaching of writing and from the potential of internet technology to help teacher candidates work with student populations outside their regional purview.

Staff Highlight: Mike Miller, Consultant, Kentucky Autism Training Center (KATC)

Since 2007, UofL's LGBT Center has been a beacon to LGBT students seeking support and the resources they need to be successful in their lives. But its work extends beyond the Center to include training faculty and staff allies, providing scholarships, designing innovative study abroad and domestic immersion experiences, and offering the region's first living/learning community in campus dorms that teaches students about LGBT identity.

"We are a small team in the center, so we really depend on allies and friends to help us accomplish our mission," said LGBT Center Director, Brian Buford. "And nobody does more for our Center than Mike Miller!"

Mike joined the Center's community advisory team last year and committed to helping the Center grow. As a longtime community leader, he began introducing new faces to the LGBT Center and connecting them to its mission. In August, he co-hosted a party that raised over $13,000 for the Center and started the University's first LGBT-themed football tailgate. He's become a powerful spokesperson for LGBT youth, who face increased risk factors and often come to college without family support or exposure to an LGBT community.

"Mike is the kind of friend and ally you dream about. He is so dedicated and passionate and I think people are inspired by that great energy when they are around him. At a recent reception, I asked some of the guests what brought them to the Center and most of them told me it was Mike. He was instrumental in making them aware of our resources and support," said Buford.

CEHD Student Shares Close Bond with High School Friend

Jonathan Greenard, a student in the sport administration program and UofL football player, met Ryan Tomberlin when they attended Hiram High School. At that time, Jonathan was a football player and Ryan, a special needs student, was invited to be a student manager for the team. The two became close friends and the bond is still there even though Jonathan is now a junior at UofL. Read the full story...

ECPY Student Organizes Depression Screening in West Louisville

Shelby Burton, doctoral student in the counseling psychology program, along with Tia Wells and Andrew Sellers, both students in the master's program in counseling psychology in the Department of Educational and Counseling Psychology (ECPY), organized a depression screening at the Kroger store located at 28th and Broadway. The event supported National Depression Screening Day and provided information about services offered at the Cardinal Success Program (CSP) at The Academy @ Shawnee and the Nia Center. The group reported that they received 10 new referrals to CSP, conducted approximately 25 depression screenings, and consistently engaged the public in conversation about good mental health practice, which works to further decrease the stigma of depression within the community.

ECPY Students Bring Vision Wall to Campus

Bridget Cauley, Kate Berghuis, Jody Zhong, (doctoral students), Olivia Alexander, and Tia Wells, (master's students), in the counseling psychology program in ECPY, teamed up with Dr. Katy Hopkins and the Cardinal Success Program to bring the Vision Wall Project to UofL this semester. Vision Walls are a project of Hidden Voices/We Are Here USA, which is a national group dedicated to raising awareness of sexual violence. They are staffed by volunteers who assist anyone who wants to write on a post-it note their answer to the question, "Imagine a world without sexual violence--what's different?" Their notes are placed on the wall for everyone to read.

"The Vision Wall was a great success this year, and we hope to continue bringing this important project to UofL. I want to extend a special thanks to Dr. Snyder for reaching out to us about this opportunity, and to Dr. Hopkins and the Cardinal Success Program for partnering with us," said Bridget Cauley.
