Presents:

Immigration Trends and the Impact on Social Work Practice

Presenters: Jonathan Biaolosky, JD; Katherine Miller, MSSW; Lilian Little, MSSW Intern

The purpose of this course is to assist social workers in gaining a better understanding of US immigration law and its enforcement impact on individuals, families, communities, and the nation as a whole. Participants will learn ways that social workers can assist immigration attorneys and vice versa and become familiar with basic immigration law concepts, including U and T visas and immigration options for victims of domestic violence. Participants will be provided with an overview of NASW policies and standards pertaining to immigration and practice and up-to-date legislative landscape in Kentucky. As part of the course, real life scenarios will be given along with an appropriate social worker response. Participants will also learn about human trafficking and the impact it has locally, as well as resources available to help these victims.
