

The Latin American and Latino Studies Program Invites You
to a screening of:

“Children in No-Man's Land”

Directed by Anayansi Prado

Monday, March 23, 2009

12:00-1:00 p.m.

Elaine Chao Auditorium in Ekstrom Library

Anayansi Prado produces and directs documentaries about the experiences and challenges of Latinos. Her first production, Maid in America, was completed in 2004, and concerns the lives of domestic workers in Los Angeles. Ms. Prado's second independent film is the recently released Children in No-Man's Land, which focuses on the plight of undocumented children who cross the border into the United States. <http://www.impactofilms.com/children/index.html> Ms. Prado will present the Annual Minx Auerbach Lecture in Women's and Gender Studies, "Insider/Observer: The Immigrant Experience through the Lens," on Wednesday, March 25, 2009 at 6:00 in the Speed Museum Auditorium, co-sponsored by LALS and the Commonwealth Center for the Humanities and Society.

This screening is co-sponsored by the English Department and The Commonwealth Center for the Humanities and Society

Free and Open to the Public
