Subject:	Academic Analytics: Quarterly Database Update Announcement

Dear Louisville Team,

As you know, we are continuing to update the database to meet our next release target of September, 2015 for the AAD2014 database delivery. Most of our clients have been submitting faculty lists for 2014 and processing is currently underway.

As part of the updating process, we will release an automatic update to the AAD2013 database on Friday, June 5th, 2015 . This update contains several improvements over the February update of the 2013 release.

This update will include client institution updates to person groupings and unit classification.
- If you have submitted any amendments to faculty lists or unit classifications for the 2013 database, those changes will appear here.

Identification and classification of publications
- We continue to enhance the classifications of scholarly articles, conference proceedings, books, and book chapters. This has resulted in some scholarly products moving across categories in the new release.

- We have added over 280 honorific awards to the database since the initial release of the 2013 database

Updated Journal Publication Dates
- We have received updated publication date information from numerous publishers which has allowed us to update publication dates for many articles in the database.

As always, we welcome your comments and suggestions to make this the best database possible.

Kind regards,
Hannah
