

International Travel Guidance & Certification

The University of Louisville encourages its faculty and staff to participate in international activities and promotes the development of opportunities for international study and research. While travel to most countries does not typically present any legal issues for faculty or staff, it is important for international travelers to consider export control regulations. For more information on this topic please review the information at: <http://louisville.edu/research/exportcontrol>

Most importantly, do not travel to conduct research or educational activities in embargoed countries without first checking with the Director or Export and Secure Research Compliance. Please reference OFAC's Sanctions Program and Country Summaries for the most current list at: <http://www.treasury.gov/resource-center/sanctions/Programs/Pages/Programs.aspx>

This information is designed to provide only general guidance on a complex issue. For more questions please contact will.metcalf@louisville.edu. Please sign this document and return it to fasit@louisville.edu. By signing this document, you confirm that you understand your responsibilities regarding the transfer of controlled items, commodities, equipment, technology, and technical data when traveling internationally.
