DRY

In this essay I will explain what I think it would be like without clean, running water in my life. I think it would be very scary if there wasn't running water because, you wouldn't know if you could get good water or not. One day you wouldn't be thirsty at all and the next day you could be dying if thirst. Our population would not be the same; there would probably be less people than there are now. It would be this way because there wouldn't be enough clean water so you could only have one or two children. Our technology would not be as upgraded as it is now because we wouldn't have enough water for technology and its research. There would probably be more wars for lands with good water on it or to have control over a certain river. Also a lot more people would be sick. They would be sick because water is used as an ingredient for an antidote for some sicknesses and research for sicknesses. They could also get sick from dehydration and some countries clean water is so scarce that the National Congress of Africa promised free water to people in Africa during a campaign in December of 2000. In July of 2001, a law suit was filed in Africa so that each family of five would receive 43 liters of clean water to use. Also if we didn't have clean running water we would be very dirty and would probably get sick from not being hygienic and clean. We wouldn't be able to brush our teeth or take baths. We would always be thirsty and probably never be content with what we have. There would also be a shortage of food because there wouldn't be enough good clean water to grow crops with. There wouldn't be a lot of money because the people would be spending it all on getting clean water and paying for food since we can't grow it. That's what I think my life would be like without clean, cold, running water.
