

Louisville Story Program

The Louisville Story Program is accepting applications for an undergraduate or graduate intern to assist their work on several upcoming publications and community projects. The Louisville Story Program is a literary arts outreach nonprofit and publisher that provides historically underrepresented Louisvillians with the tools and resources required to tell the stories of their lives in their own words and document their communities from the inside out. Currently LSP is working on an archive and searchable database documenting Louisville's rich Black gospel music community. The work will culminate in a 3CD box set and hardbound book documenting this musical legacy.

Duties and skill-building experiences of this unpaid internship may include historical research, interview transcription, editing of interview materials, publication assistance, data entry in the gospel archive, as well as operations support with retail outreach and fulfillment, content creation, and data evaluation.

You can learn more about our work at: <https://louisvillestoryprogram.org>

Louisville Story Program will select one intern each semester beginning in the summer of 2023 through the spring of 2024. To learn more about the position, or to apply, please contact Joseph Manning at joe@louisvillestoryprogram.org.