Louisville Story Program
(1 position in Fall / 1 position in Spring)

The Louisville Story Program is accepting applications for an intern to assist their work on several upcoming publications and community projects. The Louisville Story Program is a literary arts outreach nonprofit and publisher that provides historically underrepresented Louisvillians with the tools and resources required to tell the stories of their lives in their own words and document their communities from the inside out.

Currently, LSP is working on the Louisville Peacekeeper's Project:

> In partnership with Cities United and local violence prevention organizations, the Louisville Peacekeeper's Project will feature the stories of those most often misrepresented or underrepresented in the public discourse on public safety. Guided by the expertise and leadership of the deep network of local violence interrupters, this project will prioritize the voices of those most impacted by community violence including young adults involved in street groups, victims of gun violence, and perpetrators of gun violence. The Peacekeeper's Project will also elevate the stories of impacted families and others in the local gun violence prevention and public safety ecosystem providing a platform that offers their experience as a real solution to the public health crisis of community violence in Louisville and the nation.

Duties and skill-building experiences of this unpaid internship may include historical research, interview transcription, editing of interview materials, publication assistance, data entry in the gospel archive, as well as operations support with retail outreach and fulfillment, content creation, and data evaluation. You can learn more about our work at:
https://louisvillestoryprogram.org

Workload
~80 hours divided between online work and onsite at LSP

Please email the English Department Internship Program director, Dr. Mark Alan Mattes (mark.mattes@louisville), if you're interested in learning more about this position and the internship program.