English 599-02: Advanced Academic Writing Across Disciplines

Tuesdays & Thursdays, 2:30-3:45 pm, Spring 2016 (Bingham Humanities Bldg.)

Instructor: Dr. Andrea Olinger, Assistant Professor of English (arolin01@louisville.edu)

Who is the course for?

- Graduate and professional students who are taking courses or writing theses/dissertations
- Advanced undergraduates who are considering graduate school or writing theses
- Confident writers who want to get even better, as well as those who lack confidence and feel their academic writing needs improvement
- International students who speak English as an additional language and domestic students who are native English speakers

Students will:

- Investigate best practices for research, writing, and publishing in their discipline
- Reflect on their literacy and language background, habits, and goals
- Analyze articles in their discipline for particular linguistic and rhetorical patterns
- Apply what they've learned to an extended writing project of their design
- Improve their ability to edit for grammar, word choice, and punctuation and to craft more incisive prose
- Participate in a community of peers who share their work

What do former students think?

- "LOVED this course- it was a great outlet to investigate my discipline's writing...The course can truly be tailored to any discipline and any individual."
- "One of the most valuable gifts I have gained by taking this course is a sense of confidence."
- "I have never had such a diverse group of classmates in my own class...It was such a fantastic chance to exchange thoughts [with students] from so many different disciplines and to learn about their writing process."
- "I've learned a lot about my writing style...Although there are some areas I still need to improve upon, I think this course provided a foundation for growth and reflection that will stick with me..."
