GOODBYE & GOOD LUCK, HEATHER!

Saying goodbye is never easy, and it's even harder when it's to one of our phenomenal staff! Heather Turner has accepted a job at the Delphi Center on campus, and we couldn't be more excited for her. We would like to thank Heather for all of her hard work, and wish her the best of luck in her new position!

Heather wanted to say the following before leaving: "I have valued my time working with Honors and the Office of National and International Scholarships for so many reasons, but the thing that I will miss the most is working with such incredible students. Over the past year and a half, you guys have constantly impressed me with your talent, maturity, and motivation. I'm looking forward to keeping track of the Office's continued success while in my new position as an Enrollment Counselor in the Delphi Center. And since I'm staying at UofL, my email will be the same, so please keep in touch!"

HARRY S. TRUMAN SCHOLARSHIP FINALISTS

We are very excited to announce that we have TWO students interviewing as Regional Finalists for the 20156 Harry S. Truman Scholarship: Juniors Hannah Wilson and Kyle Schroader! This highly competitive federal award recognizes exceptional U.S. College and University juniors who demonstrate academic excellence in combination with a record of leadership and community service. Each Truman Scholar receives up to $30,000 for graduate study from the Truman Foundation and scholars also receive priority admission and supplemental financial aid at premier graduate institutions. Kyle and Hannah will be interviewing at Vanderbilt University on Tuesday, March 29th. Let's all wish them the best of luck!

Kyle Schroader is a Harlan Scholar and a Cardinal Covenant Scholar and he has dual majors in Political Science and History. Kyle is interested in issues of intimate partner violence and his policy proposal deals with the creation of Safe Places within local businesses that would help victims of abuse escape their abusers. He plans on pursuing a JD at the New York School of Law, where he will specialize in Family, Gender, and Sexuality Law.

Hannah Wilson is a McConnell scholar and has three majors: Political Science, Philosophy, and Women's and Gender Studies. Her areas of interest include LGBTQ rights and women's equality in politics. Building off the work she has done with Kentucky's Fairness Campaign, Hannah's policy proposal focuses on adoption rights of LGBTQ individuals. She hopes to continue her studies at the University of California Berkeley in the joint JD/PhD program.

The Great Debate: Pie v Cake

PIE

Luke Buckman
Local Pie Enthusiast, Honors Advisor

It's no secret that I love food. One of my favorite food discussion topics is "Pie or Cake?" If you've been around me longer than a couple of hours, I likely know your preferred position on this vital question. And, in fairness to Marianna and all defenders of cake, I enjoy a good cake. However, I adore pie. My assigned task is to make you see the world as I do - through pie glasses. So why is pie better? There's a good chance nothing I say will sway you to pie side, because you've either already cast your mental (or physical—don't forget the ballot box in Etscorn) vote for one or the other. Nevertheless, here are some things I know and feel about pie.

Why is your chosen dessert better?

I spent an hour or so looking through photos I've taken over the last three years. After photos of my partner, and our animals, there were more photos of pie than anything else. I counted more than 20 photos of pie.

Pie is very photogenic, let me assure you. The camera loves pie. This is some of what I saw:

- pies in variation stages of preparation—from making the dough through rolling it out and then filling it with fruit or pecans or any other filling
- two different versions of pumpkin pie that I made in late November (more on that particular week later)
- tiny homemade peach and blueberry hand pies that were so cute and pretty until I mangled them in my excitement to eat them
- a counter filled with muffin-shaped pies (which I also crushed with my mighty pie-consuming hands!)
- several photos of homemade blueberry and cherry pie (my favorite, for those keeping track)
- and an enormous slab of pie I bought from Fergbak-er's in Queenstown, New Zealand

CAKE

Marianna Michael
Local Cake Enthusiast, Honors Alumna

Though it is hard to believe, I have been embroiled in one of the most intellectually challenging debates for the past five years. Yes, the debate is none other than cake versus pie. Though there is a clear winner, Mr. Luke Buckman is delusional in thinking that the winner is pie. I will not demean your intelligence by attempting to spin complex arguments. You see, the truth is, this argument is simple. Cake wins life. Just remember, cake is a baked good. Pie is a baked bad.

Why is your chosen dessert better?

Cake cares and takes your lifestyle into account. It comforts you and offers you a sweet treat after a long day's work. Cakes do not discriminate. They come in all shapes and sizes. Cake is portable and sturdy; it will never fail you. Though it can be delicate and delectable, it can also be heavy and filling. From tortes to pound cake, you can have whatever you like.

According to an unconfirmed and unreleased Pew Research poll, cake is the dessert of choice for the majority of the world. One only has to look to popular culture to see just how influential the stock dessert is. From Rhianna to Joe Jonas, cake has inspired multiple artists to write record breaking and career making hits. Our great city of Louisville is an obvious and avid cake supporter. Around Louisville you have many cake shops, your options are great and wide. Just this past weekend I frequented the Homemade Pie and Ice Cream Kitchen, but low and behold the only place in Louisville seemingly dedicated to pie sold cake. The presence of pie's antithesis at its only stronghold is further proof of cake's superior nature.

How does your dessert handle holidays?

Though people generally think of pie when they think of the

The Great Debate

PIE

And that's only a few of them! Pies are extraordinarily versatile with many shapes, sizes, and flavors.

Here are some questions I don't hear too often: When is a good time to eat pie? What's a good day to eat pie? That's because all time is pie time. All days are suitable for pie consumption. Have you ever eaten pie for breakfast? Yes, I thought so. Me too.

How does your dessert handle holidays?

Holidays, as with all other days of the year, are pie-friendly. Here are some examples of pie it's acceptable to eat on holidays:

- All Pies

How does your dessert handle special occasions?

By special occasion, I suppose that means "a day on which you eat pie?" But, in case I'm mistaken, and this means weddings, this is what I've observed at weddings. Couples have such disdain for cake that they shove it in each other's mouths. This would never happen with pie. But, if such a thing were to occur, it would not be nearly as messy because pies are perfectly mouth-sized little wedges of bliss.

Still, I admit cake has its place. At weddings and birthdays, but I've also been to numerous parties where pie has been served. These are truly special occasions. If you happen to attend such an event, I urge you to look around and I bet you'll see an extra little gleam in everyone's eyes. Is it because they are celebrating two individuals' love for each other? Or sharing in the happiness of someone's birthday? Maybe, but most likely it's because they know they'll be eating pie very soon.

How has your dessert made an impact on our society?

Both pie and cake have been designated with an annual day of celebration. Most people know when Pi(e) Day is, but just in case, it's 3/14. Cake, too, has its own national day of celebration. In 2015, National Cake Day was on Thursday, November 26th. What did people on National Cake Day? Pumpkin Pie. About fifty million of them. I think this is where I drop the mic and walk away.

Why shouldn't people eat cake?

Eating cake is okay if you're fine with perpetual sadness.

CAKE

holidays, it's only because that is the only time when people remember its existence. Apart from the winter months, pies become scarce and almost non-existent. Some may say that pie is the chosen dessert because it has its own day, but that's only because every day is cake day.

Cake, on the other hand, never abandons you. Every day is a holiday and cake is there to celebrate it with you from the moment you wake up. Cake is like that lifelong best friend that never leaves you and shows up to every accolade and ceremony. You never miss that friend because, though you take her for granted, she is always there.

How does your dessert handle special occasions?

A special occasion cannot be celebrated without a cake. People wait for cakes. Our very own Honors Program routinely orders Nord's cake for the majority of the events they hold throughout the year. Who can say no to the chocolate, strawberry, lemon, or vanilla cake offered by our local bakery?

Can an occasion be deemed special if there is no cake involved? I think not. Without cake, there would be no means of celebrating special occasions or making announcements. How will the world know that a person has graduated, received a promotion, or is just absolutely amazing? Cakes are not only delectable, they send messages of love and support. Pies do not make such proclamations.

How has your dessert made an impact on our society?

I think the better question is, how has cake not impacted our society? Historically, one of the most oft quoted lines is Marie Antoinette's, "Let them eat cake." Yes, it is posited that she did not actually say that, but we are certain she did not tell the people to eat pie.

Why shouldn't people eat pie?

Pies are aggressive. People pie their enemies in the face with this food item that cannot even be called a dessert. You never hear about people getting hit in the face with cake. Maybe, when push comes to shove, a couple in wedded bliss will dab some cake on their significant others' face, but other than that, cake is a pacifist.

The Great Debate

PIE

Where is your favorite place to get pie in Louisville?

The best place locally to get a pie is at my house. Failing that, I would recommend the J&T Bakery (formerly Thornberry's), a third-generation pie shop that's been serving Louisville for more than 60 years.

Do you have any closing remarks?

This is a celebration of two individual's passion for pie and cake. This is about debating one of life's eternal questions. I just happen to consider myself a champion of pie. Many of my greatest memories involve pie and the wonderful people in my life, past and present. For others, those same memories might me filled with images of cake. My vision is happily through pie-shaped lenses.

When I was asked to write about pie, I kept thinking of a song that basically sums up how I feel about it. So, I'll leave you with these lines from XTC's "Senses Working Overtime":

And I can see, hear, smell, touch, taste
And I've got one, two, three, four, five
Senses working overtime
Trying to take this all in

Edited by Katherine Armstrong, Student Writer

CAKE

Where is your favorite place to get cake in Louisville?

Everywhere, but more specifically Plehn's Bakery - get the white cake with buttercream icing. I get that cake every year for my birthday.

Do you have any closing remarks?

Cakes are like people. They have many layers and each layer can be a different flavor. No other dessert has been able to recreate the complexity of the human race in so delicate a form. And so I appeal to your humanity and superior taste, remember your first piece of cake. With every forkful, you fell in love. The smell of freshly baked cakes reminds you of all that is good with the world: baking with your loved ones, creating a baked good for that special someone's special day, or indulging yourself after a trying day. Then you got older and learned about all of the other forms your favorite dessert takes. And so I urge you, let us rise like a phoenix from the easily-burned, dry pie crust, and once and for all end this debate. Cake rules. Pie drools. Thank you my fellow cake compatriots and have a wonderful, cake-filled life.
