APPLICATION

DEADLINE

10/21 by 4:00 PM

Course Description:

This course is about the signature traditional and popular music of the American Southeast through the beginning of commercial country music, especially that associated with the Appalachian region of Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky. The material will include ballads (both transplants from the British Isles and also more recent ones), "old time tunes" (from the early days of radio and recordings), and traditional bluegrass (from the original Bill Monroe and his Blue Grass Boys through about 1975). While we will spend time identifying, analyzing and placing examples of these types of music in a cultural context, we will also pay special attention to different ways that music relates to place, whether it's a fiddle tune named for a geographical feature ("Shippingport") or a ballad about something that took place in an actual place ("Baltimore Fire") or a lyric that is anchored in a specific landscape ("East Virginia Blues") or a more generic concept such as "region" ("Sweet Sunny South"), "home" ("Eight More Miles to Louisville") or "heaven" ("Angel Band"). Then we will travel to some of the places that this music is about, or from which it comes. This course will fulfill requirements in the Humanities or Social Sciences.

The anticipated student cost for this travel is $300 - $350 per student. The final course fee will be determined by the end of October. The student fee will be charged to the student's university account.

Potential site locations include:

Rosine, Whitesburg, Hindman, Pine Mountain Settlement School, Berea (all in Kentucky), Clinton and Bristol, TN, and Hiltons, VA.

The course application will be available through the Honors Program website during the first week of advising (beginning 9/12).

CAPTAIN'S LOG: STARDATE 9716.16

These are the voyages of the Honors Seminar, "The Rediscovered Country: Star Trek at 50." Starfleet Captain Dr. Dwain Pruitt and his class boldly go across the years and galaxies of Star Trek. Crew logs appear below.

Dr. Dwain Pruitt

"Star Trek" is the perfect vehicle for exploring American popular culture's evolution from the 1960s to today. Science fiction is usually about today's concerns projected into the distant future or onto another planet. This is particularly true of "Star Trek," which Gene Roddenberry intended to be a social commentary from its beginning. As a result, each iteration of "Trek" allows the viewer to peek inside a generation's anxieties and aspirations about the human condition. The original series is more about the Cold War, Vietnam, the sexual revolution, and prejudice than it is about Captain Kirk wrestling the Gorn in front of papier mâché rocks.

Emma Radulski

I'm a new Star Trek fan, so it's quite exciting to be taking the Star Trek seminar- it's a very thorough introduction to the franchise! I'd expected to enjoy it, but I didn't know that it would connect so well with other interests of mine. By analyzing the history of Star Trek and science fiction, we are also exploring past and contemporary social issues. Representation of marginalized groups, sexism in our media, warfare, colonialism - Star Trek is a way to look at all of those and more. It's also very cool to have a legitimate excuse to marathon The Original Series!

Jazmen Conner

I think that the Star Trek seminar class is a very interesting course of study. It brings into focus social justice themes that one would not have been aware of before. Critical ideas on race relations are prevalent throughout many episodes in the series, and thus many class discussions have centered around how the show has treated these ideas. From the first interracial kiss, to the first black captain, or main character, Star Trek has been breaking down barriers for generations.

Noah Smith

It's always fun when your homework is to watch TV, but it's also been incredibly interesting to learn about the history and growth of science fiction. Because of when science fiction really gained popularity I'm finding a lot of it often ties back to the Cold War, which I wasn't necessarily anticipating. I'm looking forward to how it will tie in with themes of social justice and I'm eager to discuss representation in the series.

Mariah Moore

We're not just learning about a universe that inspired the creation of seven TV series and thirteen movies, we're studying the history of science fiction and reasons behind the genre's success. We're trying to better understand what it is about Star Trek that speaks to audiences from 1966 all the way to 2016.

SCHOLAR SHOWCASE REVIEW

Some said this was the most exciting Honors Scholars Showcase to date! It had everything - ballads, dogs, and of course great Faculty presenting their seminars. Honors Scholars got a sneak peak at seminars offered this coming Spring semester before the advising campaign kicked off the next day, while enjoying themed-cookies and dinner from Honors. Thank you to everyone who coordinated this event and to all who participated!

2ND YEAR SCIENCE LLC STUDENTS

CONNECT AT BERNHEIM

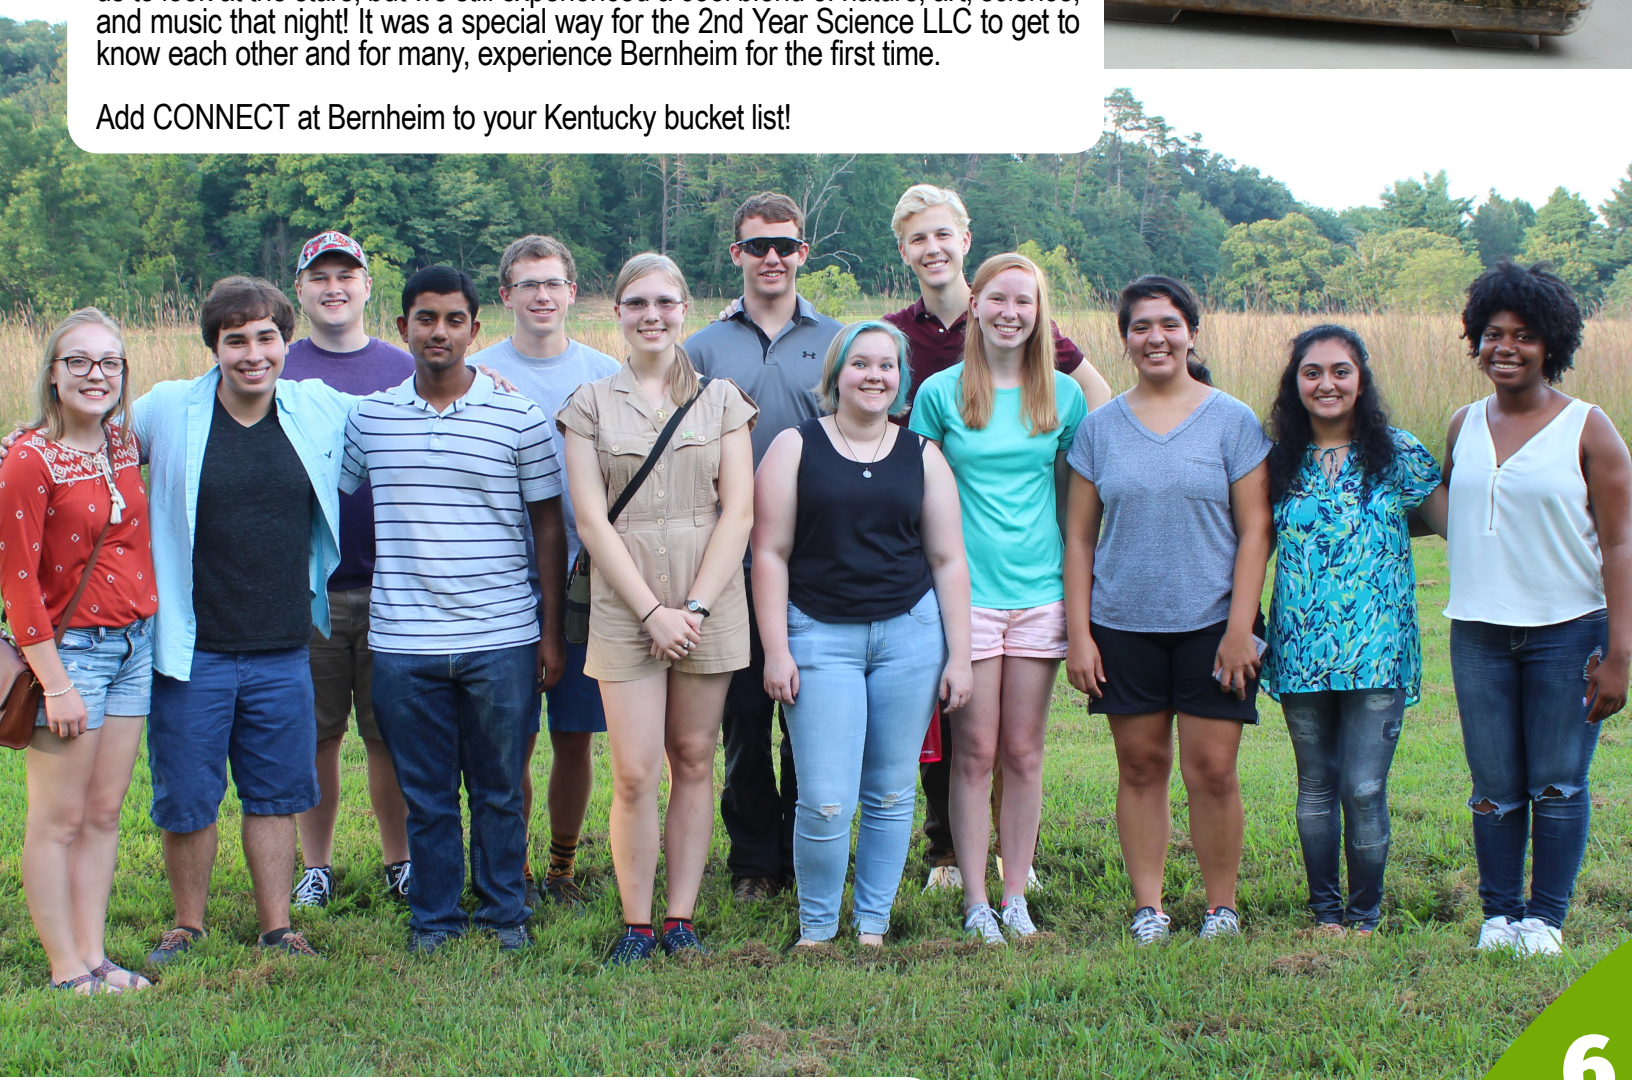

By Emilie Cornett, 2nd Year Science LLC Student

On Saturday, August 27, the 2nd Year Science LLC started the year off with a super sweet field trip to Bernheim Forest, a beautiful Kentucky arboretum just 30 minutes from campus. Thanks to our awesome coordinator, Olivia Sailor, we didn't just go visit the arboretum, we got to experience CONNECT at Bernheim!

CONNECT is an annual nighttime summer event held at the forest where local artists, musicians, scientists, botanists, food vendors, and more are invited to celebrate and share their work for a fun night of learning and creativity. Together as an LLC, we traveled through the arboretum and visited amazing exhibits. Some of the coolest stops had to be the dragon caterpillar (think back to the caterpillar from Bug's Life - except this one was the size of your hand!); the "Inmate Wall," a project where inmates at a local prison recorded their favorite summer memories on a wall and it was then displayed for CONNECT participants; and definitely the houses a local artist crafted from pictures she took on a trip to another country and then hung in the trees.

Unfortunately, it was a little too cloudy to use the telescopes they had set up for us to look at the stars, but we still experienced a cool blend of nature, art, science, and music that night! It was a special way for the 2nd Year Science LLC to get to know each other and for many, experience Bernheim for the first time.

Add CONNECT at Bernheim to your Kentucky bucket list!

MEET OLIVIA HILL

Hello Everyone! I am the Graduate Intern for Honors this semester. I completed my BA in Anthropology at the University of Louisville and I am currently a second year College Student Personnel graduate student. I'm excited for the opportunity to work with some of you this semester.

Outside of work and school I like watching Netflix, going to art fairs, and just hanging out with my friends. I love trying all the new restaurants around Louisville. I also have a couple of cats and one can sit on command.

One piece of advice I would give undergraduate students is to step out of your comfort zone. Some of my best experiences have been when I tried new things that I normally wouldn't. I have also made some of my best friends from doing this.

CAMPAIGN PROBLEMS?

Didn't get the campaign email yesterday or today?
Made an appointment with the wrong advisor?
Other technology problems?

Be sure to contact Honors ASAP (preferably via phone or by coming to the Etscorn Honors Center.) The sooner you let us know there is an issue the better! Don't forget that campaign scheduling instructions are also available on our website: <http://bit.ly/2bUUJZk>

Pro Tip:
When scheduling an appointment you should always receive a Confirmation Email!

If you didn't you may not have an appointment!

Sonnets on a Sunday Poetry Contest Deadline: Friday, September 16th Event: Sunday, November 13 • 5:45 PM Louisville Water Tower

University of Louisville's Sonnets on a Sunday Contest is open for submissions. Ten winning sonnets, written by U of L students, will be chosen for performance by the Commonwealth Theatre players on Sunday, November 13th, 2016 at the Louisville Water Tower. Poets of U of L are asked to review ten sonnets by Shakespeare (listed below) and write 1-5 sonnets "in response" to these ten. Poets are invited to interpret the phrase "in response" however they see fit: some might write homages, others parodies, and others still yet may respond to something thematic they see across this selection of Shakespeare's sonnets. Some poets might directly reference the sonnets to which they are responding, some may indirectly reference those sonnets, and others may feel no need to reference Shakespeare's sonnets at all. The choices are entirely up to the poet! Just keep in mind: sonnets are 14 lines long, may showcase any number of formal rhyme schemes, and, in English, are generally 10 syllables per line.
