

UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

DISTINCTION TRACK PROGRAM

The Distinction Track Program provides students the opportunity for academic exploration and scholarly productivity in an area of medicine for which they have a passion. This program is designed to increase the number of students choosing careers in academic medicine. Currently offering tracks in:

Business & Leadership

Health Equity & Medical Justice

Global & Public Health

Medical Education

Research

BUSINESS & LEADERSHIP

The Distinction in Business & Leadership track seeks to provide a fundamental knowledge base that explores the intersection of business and medicine, and arms trainees with a vital skillset to succeed in our health economy.

HEALTH EQUITY & MEDICAL JUSTICE

The Distinction in Health Equity & Medical Justice track is designed to introduce students to principles of social justice in healthcare, understand health disparities in the U.S., and engage in scholarly work on health equity and justice.

GLOBAL & PUBLIC HEALTH

The Distinction in Global & Public Health track introduces students to various aspects and perspectives of global health through the lenses of clinical, social, political, and epidemiological study.

MEDICAL EDUCATION

The Distinction in Medical Education track will provide students to engage in activities focused on developing their skills in multiple teaching modes pertinent to medical education, as well as conducting educational research.

RESEARCH

The Distinction in Research track is designed as an enrichment program for a select groups of medical students. The role of clinician as researcher and the methods of basic and translational research will be taught throughout the DIR track. The format will include equipping the students with commonly used tools for research and hands-on mentored research experience.

CLAIRE FELLER

“The UofL School of Medicine’s Health Equity and Medical Justice distinction track has broadened my perspective on the history of racism, discrimination, and inequity within healthcare that contribute to health disparities that exist today. By understanding the root causes of these disparities, I will be better equipped to recognize their wide-reaching impacts on my patients and advocate for justice as a physician.”
