

The Fall 2015 Samuel Cheng, M.D. Lecture in Humanities in Medicine

Sponsored by
UofL Department of Family and Geriatric Medicine

“Medical Errors made by primary care doctors.
What do patients want and deserve when an error occurs?”

Nancy Elder, M.D.

Professor and Director of Research

Department of Family and Community Medicine, University of Cincinnati

Friday, October 16, 2015

Noon – 1:00 p.m.

Kornhauser Auditorium, HSC

Dr. Elder is a graduate of University of Minnesota – Duluth and University of Minnesota-Minneapolis. For 10 years she has researched, written, and spoken on medical errors and patient safety, especially in the outpatient primary care setting. Portions of that have been about how physicians deal with making mistakes, as well as what they should do when they observe other physicians make mistakes (especially when one is a student or a resident).

Learning objectives include: How to approach the situation of making a mistake, and/or observing another physician, resident, or student make a mistake.

The University of Louisville, School of Medicine is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians and designates this educational activity for a maximum of 1 credit of AMA PRA Category 1 Credit™.

Lunch is provided for the first 145 who make reservations by noon Monday, October 12th.
For reservations e-mail dfgmadm@louisville.edu