Lori Andrews, J.D.
IIT's Institute for Science, Law and Technology
Chicago-Kent College of Law

Lori Andrews is a University Distinguished Professor of Law at IIT Chicago-Kent College of Law and Director of IIT's Institute for Science, Law and Technology. She has published widely on internet privacy, including her latest book, I Know Who You Are and I Saw What You Did: Social Networks and the Death of Privacy (2013).

Professor Andrews has been an adviser on technologies to Congress, the World Health Organization, the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the federal Department of Health and Human Services, the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences, and several foreign nations, including the Emirate of Dubai, the French National Assembly, and G8 Science Ministers. She chaired the ELSI advisory committee to the Human Genome Project.

Professor Andrews' path-breaking litigation about technologies caused the National Law Journal to list her as one of the "100 Most Influential Lawyers in America." In 2005, she was made an Honorary Fellow of the American College of Legal Medicine for her "distinguished achievement in the field of legal medicine." She is the author of eleven nonfiction books and three mysteries involving a fictional geneticist. The American Bar Association Journal describes Professor Andrews as "a lawyer with a literary bent who has the scientific chops to rival any CSI investigator." She received her B.A. summa cum laude from Yale College and her J.D. from Yale Law School.
