BREAKTHROUGHS IN SPINAL CORD RESEARCH

Participants of a ground breaking study at the Kentucky Spinal Cord Injury Research Center are learning to walk again after new, innovative treatments. UofL doctors implanted an epidural stimulator in each of the participants and followed it up with rigorous locomotor training. Of the four participants, two have regained a number of motor functions that were previously unavailable to them, ultimately improving quality of life.

WELCOME TO PRESIDENT BENDAPUDI

UofL welcomed Neeli Bendapudi as the 18th president of the university. Bendapudi's inauguration was held in October as faculty, staff, students and community leaders gathered on The Oval in front of Grawemeyer Hall. She has a bright vision for UofL becoming a great place to learn, work, and invest.

Meet Asia Durr

Women's basketball player Asia Durr was named 2018 ACC Player of the Year. She earned this award during her junior year, amassing numerous titles including Top 5 in several national awards. She finished the 2017-18 season with a team high average of 17.5 points per game.

African American Equity Study

UofL was named one of the top universities in the nation in serving black students according to a report by the University of Southern California's Race and Equity Center. It tied for the top score, 3.5 out of 4, with the University of California – San Diego and the Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts.

The score is based on several factors including representation equity, gender equity, completion equity, and black students to black faculty ratio.

Open for Business

The Belknap Academic Building opened for the fall 2018 semester, expanding the university's number of classrooms and providing a hub for student resources. The building was created with active learning in mind, utilizing open spaces, moveable furniture, white boards for student use, classroom displays and more. The building also serves as a one stop shop for students, housing advising, academic support staff and tutoring services in one convenient location.

Outstanding Alumni

UofL alumni have been making headlines across the disciplines.

- Gina Haspel '78 was named director of the CIA. She recently visited UofL as a part of the McConnell Center talks.
- Denise Clayton '76 was elected chief judge of the Kentucky Court of Appeals, becoming the first black woman to serve in that position.
- Austin Marshall '12, '13 was a part of the SpaceX team that launched the Falcon Heavy in February 2018.

Nationwide REACH

REACH, UofLs program for academic support services, is taking its place in the national spotlight. In addition to serving more than 3,500 students through tutoring, peer mentoring, and study sessions, the program also serves a benchmark for similar programs at other universities as evidenced by some of its recent accomplishments:

- Geoff Bailey, REACH executive director, recently was named vice president of the National College Learning Center Association (NCLCA).
- UofLs REACH team will host the NCLCA annual conference in October 2019 with nearly 500 attendees expected.
- The program established nationally acclaimed training curriculum that allows faculty and staff to have a better understanding of where a college student is intellectually.

Setting the bar

Second-year law school student Nickole Durbin was named regional president for the Hispanic National Bar Association's Law Student Division. Durbin serves over a region that includes Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio, and is in charge of coordinating network events and sharing job opportunities with the regional chapters, as well as participating in a national conference and moot court competition.

Winning words

Third-year law student Corey Thomas won the 2018 Kentucky Bar Association Student Writing Competition with the article "A Little Party Never Killed Anybody: How Courts Should Abandon Partisan Gerrymandering Claims to Allow a Political Solution." Thomas is the associate symposium editor of the UofL Law Review and also serves as Honor Council Chair and the Student Bar Association's executive vice president. He earned his undergraduate degree in political science in 2016.
