Worthwhile Investment

The University of Louisville is creating a new campus in downtown Louisville to be known as the UofL Christina Lee Brown Envirome Institute – New Vision of Health Campus, where study will focus on health as a shared community resource, incorporating environmental and cultural factors. The campus will be both a world-class research center and a nexus for community engagement, spawning citizen scientists and making health equity everyone’s pursuit. The launch of the New Vision of Health Campus is made possible by a commitment from health advocate Christina Lee Brown of Louisville valued at $47 million – the largest-ever donation received by the university. Brown is providing $30 million over 20 years to support the institute and is giving rent-free use of the buildings to the university, equating to a $17 million in-kind donation.

Setting High Standards

- The Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Education once more has designated UofL a “Research 1” doctoral university with very high research activity. UofL is one of only 146 universities- roughly 4% of those considered – to receive this designation.
- INSIGHT Into Diversity magazine again recognized UofL for its outstanding efforts toward diversity and inclusion, making 2022 the ninth consecutive year the university has received the national publication’s Higher Education Excellence in Diversity (HEED) Award, and the fourth year the UofL Health Sciences Center has earned the Health Professions HEED Award. This also marks the third year the Cardinals have been selected as Diversity Champions, a distinction given to institutions scoring in the top tier of all HEED Award winners – only 15 were named this year.
- The University of Louisville’s “Here & Beyond” brand campaign received multiple awards in the 10th annual Education Digital Marketing Awards, which “recognizes the best educational websites, digital content, electronic communications, mobile media and social media.”

Strong Financial Position

The University of Louisville's 2022-23 fiscal year kicked off with a mathematically and strategically balanced budget. At $1.5 billion, the FY 2022-23 budget is the largest in the university's history. Among the budget's many highlights are a 0.0% tuition increase for undergraduate students and the development of a new Cardinal Commitment financial aid program that will supplement other forms of financial aid to help ensure full cost of tuition for resident Pell-eligible students. Employees received a 2.5% cost-of-living increase, and minimum starting wages for hourly employees increased to $14.75.

Community Connections

UofL creates social, cultural and learning opportunities that bring people to campus or bring the campus to people through virtual and external partnerships that improve quality of life by leveraging faculty, staff and student expertise and talent.

- The university collaborates with the five Signature Partnership schools in west Louisville through new programs including the Central High Health Magnet Program with the Schools of Dentistry, Medicine, Nursing and Public Health, as well as the Math Specialist program from the College of Education and Human Development.
- A new clinical site in Shelbyville, Ky., makes it possible for the UofL School of Dentistry to further fulfill its mission of improving the oral health of Kentuckians.
- The College of Education and Human Development and the Ohio Valley Educational Cooperative are partnering on a program aimed at addressing teacher shortages in Kentucky.
- Academic partnerships with global institutions continue through relationships including those maintained by School of Public Health & Information Sciences in India and School of Medicine in China.
