Growing access to healthcare

Through the acquisition of KentuckyOne Health's Louisville-area assets, including Jewish Hospital, the university expanded its UofL Health enterprise and the ability to ensure access to quality healthcare for patients across the entire community. About 5,500 former KentuckyOne employees joined UofL Health and the access to the additional facilities will boost training opportunities and research capacity for UofL students and faculty.

Fulbright full house

UofL continued its impressive streak of Fulbright scholars, with 14 students winning the prestigious scholarship for international travel and study in 2019. Since 2003, 133 students have received Fulbrights, more than all other Kentucky public institutions combined.

Closing the Tech Gap

Through the establishment of a new Skills Academy, UofL and IBM are bridging the digital divide. The skills academy is the first of its kind that IBM has developed with a higher education institution and will provide curriculum and educational tools concentrated on eight fast growing technology areas: artificial intelligence, blockchain technology, cybersecurity, cloud computing, internet of things, quantum computing, data science and design thinking.

Their World's a Stage

Theatre Arts graduate students Kala Ross and LaShondra Hood won the distinguished National Irene Ryan Acting Award at the Kennedy Center American College Theatre Festival in Washington, D.C. It was the first time students from UofL's theatre arts department took home the prestigious prize. Both students received scholarships for their win.

Top Rankings

UofL once again landed among the top U.S. institutions for research activity. For the fourth time, the Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Education designated UofL a "Research 1" doctoral university with "very high research activity." Additionally, the university is recognized as a Carnegie Community Engagement University, making it one of only 69 schools in the country to receive both classifications.

Planning for Success

President Neeli Bendapudi launched the university's 2019-2022 Strategic Plan, geared to make the University of Louisville a great place to learn, work and invest while fostering diversity, equity and inclusion. Over the next three years, the campus community will focus on initiatives including experiential learning, increasing access to financial aid, adding professional development opportunities and increasing business and industry partnerships.

Have heart

UofL researchers are hoping to prevent heart disease through nature. The Green Heart Project is a first of its kind study of the effects of plants on human health. UofL joined forces with The Nature Conservancy to plant 8,000 trees and shrubs in South Louisville neighborhoods so researchers can examine how increasing greenness may lessen incidents of heart disease. The five-year, $15 million project is funded by the National Institutes of Health.

Excellence in diversity

UofL's diversity initiatives were rewarded with a sixth HEED (Higher Education Excellence in Diversity) award from Insight Into Diversity magazine. The committee recognized UofL's outstanding efforts toward diversity and inclusion, specifically through the university's Black Male Initiative, its LGBTQ work and the law school's Human Rights Advocacy Program.

Cards come together

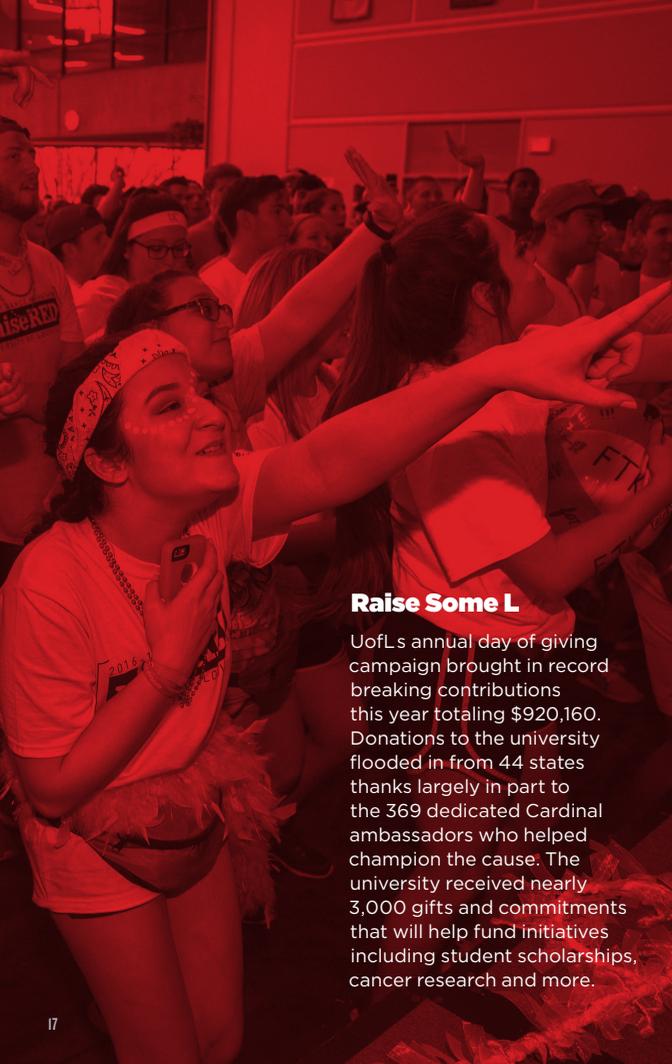

Several hundred UofL faculty, staff, students and alumni flocked to sites across campus and the city for Cards Come Together, the university's inaugural week of service. Volunteer service is a key component of being a Cardinal, with more than 2,000 community engagement activities designed to improve quality of life for the campus and its neighbors reported each year.

Raise Some L

UofL's annual day of giving campaign brought in record breaking contributions this year totaling $920,160. Donations to the university flooded in from 44 states thanks largely in part to the 369 dedicated Cardinal ambassadors who helped champion the cause. The university received nearly 3,000 gifts and commitments that will help fund initiatives including student scholarships, cancer research and more.

World renowned artist and double alum Sam Gilliam '55, '61 is still working hard at age 85. The painter, widely known for his use of saturated color and his highly improvisational technique, entered into a partnership with Pace Gallery in New York City. The collaboration marks the first time his work has been represented by a gallery in New York, but Gilliam is not a stranger to the art world. He has created dozens of public art pieces, some of which can be found in Detroit, New York, Atlanta, San Francisco and Boston. Gilliam's work is in the permanent collections of 56 museums and he has honorary doctorates from eight universities.

Training for Tragedies

Alumnus Madison Kommer '19 dedicated his final two years at UoFL to training his peers for mass casualty disasters. Kommer and Associate Professor of Pediatrics Bethany Hodge designed the first published disaster medicine certificate series for medical students in the country and perhaps the world. More than 130 students took part in the certificate series which is now the medical school's largest supplemental program.

Scoring in the Classroom

UoFL student-athletes achieved a record 91% graduation rate in the latest Graduation Success Rate Report. The Cardinals' GSR has risen 25% since reporting began 15 years ago. All UoFL student athletes combined to produce an average grade point average of 3.0 or better for each of the last 17 straight semesters. Cardinal student-athletes achieved a collective 3.25 GPA combined for the Fall 2018 and Spring 2019 semesters.
