

Undergraduate Council.

The Undergraduate Council is a campus-wide forum for developing specific long-term plans and short-term strategies for integrating all aspects of undergraduate education so that general education requirements and academic majors are connected seamlessly to make these two components of the curriculum one in the minds of students.

The Undergraduate Council shall send representatives to serve on the university program review committee, make recommendations to the Provost, advise the Senate through its Academic Programs Committee, and advise undergraduate units concerning general, not unit-specific, educational policy matters and the establishment of academic schedules and calendars.

A. Membership.

1. The council shall include members as follows:

Three faculty members from the College of Arts and Sciences, one from each of its three divisions (Humanities, Natural Sciences and Social Sciences).

One faculty member from each of the other academic units offering undergraduate degree programs or courses: the College of Business and Public Administration, the College of Education and Human Development, the School of Dentistry, the Kent School of Social Work, the School of Music, the School of Nursing, the School of Public Health and Information Sciences and the Speed School of Engineering.

One faculty member from the University Libraries

One member from the Student Government Association

One member of the deans' committee on undergraduate education

The chair of the Faculty Senate Academic Programs Committee (or designee) , ex officio (voting)

A member elected at-large by professional staff advisors in the undergraduate units listed in this section.

The Vice Provost for Undergraduate Affairs, ex officio (non-voting) .

The council may from time to time designate other persons as non-voting consultants to or staff for the council.

2. Selection and term of members

Unit representatives to the council shall usually be the faculty chair of the unit's undergraduate committee or similarly qualified faculty member.

The term of membership is three years, staggered for continuity of experience.

The Chairperson will be elected annually by the council from the council membership.
