

Andrea Saltzman
The Broad Institute

ANDERA SALTZMAN, BSNM A former community health nurse, who has worked for the past fourteen years in the field of human subjects protections, Ms. Saltzman believes to be well equipped to make significant contributions to this NIH research project. Her professional experience includes work at several private biotechs, large academic medical centers, universities, and non-profit research organizations. She has been a tireless advocate on behalf of both research participants and the scientists who partner with them to advance health care for all. The area of direct-to-patient online recruitment has been of particular interest to Ms. Saltzman over the last year, and she has been a key contributor to the Broad Institute's efforts to discern how to proceed in compliance with regulations outside of the United States. A diverse educational background, including degrees in both English and Nursing, as well as a Medical Ethics Fellowship at Harvard Medical School further support her ability to help ensure the success of this research proposal.
