Re: University of Louisville Recognition

Dear Dr. Postel:

The Kentucky Council on Postsecondary Education (KCPE) recently received your request for verification that the University of Louisville is authorized by the state to offer courses at all its current locations including, but not limited to, the Belknap & Health Sciences campuses.

The University of Louisville is established as an institution of higher education in Kentucky through operation of law, specifically Kentucky Revised Statutes (KRS) 164.810-.870. The university is exempt from state licensure and its approval to operate via statute does not expire and remains in good standing. The University of Louisville is authorized to operate in all its current locations, including those cited above.

Sincerely,

Associate Vice President
