WELCOME FROM THE DIRECTOR

Happy Black History Month,

Time moves so fast! February of 2024 is here – with jampacked community events, on and off campus. I hope this message finds you well, and possibly ready to explore "glocal" happenings that celebrate the rich heritage of the African diaspora. No matter where I am in the world during this month, I love how easily I can find innovative programming events aimed at uplifting the critical contributions and radical joy from Black folks.

Why do we celebrate Black History Month at the University of Louisville Women's Center – a space of belonging for people invested in gender equity? What are the connections to Black history, and our intersectional feminist work with students? Here are some questions and thoughts that I reflect upon during this time of year – as a person passionate about justice for women, femmes and gender expansive folks:

- During Black History Month, observers can learn about diverse leaders in the African diaspora who have co-led multiracial social movements across time and space and sometimes, against all odds. The individual stories connect to a web of important lessons about leadership development, collective work and emergent strategies for freedom for all. And yes female-identifying leaders and followers played a significant role for systemic change in every sector of our society. If I do not see a woman figure in a historical recount, I wonder...is there more to discover? Did we miss someone or something? Who is in the center of these stories told over and over? What else can we learn?
- RESILIENCE & INNOVATION
  Ideas about leadership compel me to consider innovation and resiliency by leaders of the African diaspora. Despite long standing barriers, Black folks had to be resilient to create innovation in many areas including the arts, science, technology and so much more. How do you and I become adaptive and innovative when we encounter challenging life experiences or trauma? Is it possible to reach goals such as co-creating healthy neighborhoods, higher quality of life, family wellness and community building while experiencing adversities? What tools or approaches do I need to survive and thrive in my work, and possibly innovate with others? What else can I learn from Black history that will help me navigate my daily life? And please let's ask our elders how did they steer through so much! I am in deep gratitude for these exemplar models and stories that can foster new concepts, products, and for services for equity.
- RADICAL REST
  Last but not least, Black History Month teaches all of us to consider radical rest after centuries of struggle. For some of us, we come from families and communities who did not have the privilege to "rest our bones" to nap, play, dream or to be freely creative. Did your family ever experience seasons of rest or a "sabbatical" from the busyness of life or social justice work? Radical rest can be an act of resistance and a gift to yourself.

As the first Black and openly queer director of the Women's Center in the past thirty years, I find Black History Month as a great opportunity to "pause", and consider the transformative lessons about social change from the lived experiences of Black folks. There have been many "wins" in the face of horrific intergenerational trauma. I am in gratitude to the ancestors and the living for contributing to these triumphs for justice. My late stepfather, Dr. J. Blaine Hudson, a civil rights activist, educator and the former dean of arts and sciences at UofL, supported many gender equity initiatives during his tenure. He shares this message with us -

"We must become change-agents, both in our personal lives (by setting good examples for others) and in concert with others."

I agree and I am joyful about the Black trailblazers right here in Kentucky. We invite you to join us for the Women's Center's programming events during Black History Month to REST, reflect and celebrate together this month and the rest of the year for Black history!

In solidarity,

THE FIGHT CONTINUES...

Campbell Clark (She/Her) Class of 2027 United Nations Association - Women Advocacy Chair

The Kentucky General Assembly is still in session. Here are some important bills that were submitted:

HB 9 and SB 6 will restrict DEI in public universities in KY, putting many RSOs at risk. If you have any thoughts or concerns, please email me at cjclar22@louisville.edu as I am working on compiling student responses to send to the legislature.

Want to learn how to be politically active and don't know where to start? Come to Advocacy in Action on Feb 20th 4:30-7pm in the Cultural & Equity Center. This will be in honor of World Social Justice Day.

Get Organized! Here is how you can be an advocate off campus. Below are some Kentucky based organizations with locations and meetings in Louisville that would love to have you get engaged.

- Kentuckians for the Commonwealth
- Kentucky Youth Advocates
- KY Black
- ALCU
- League of Women Voters

It is important to reach out to your senators and representatives let them know what the public wants. You can find out who represents you and how to contact them here.

The United Nations Association - Women is a student organization advised under the Women's Center.

FAFSA is open so don't forget to complete yours! There have been some changes so check out the Financial Aid's website for more information and how to complete it.

BLACK WOMEN HISTORY & STORY Anna Julia Cooper

LEARN MORE

An author, educator, sociologist, speaker, Black liberation activist, and one of the most prominent African-American scholars in United States history. In her 1892 book titled, "A Voice from the South by a Black Woman of the South" she asserted that educated Black women played a pivotal role in uplifting the entire race. The book marked a significant milestone, as it stands as "one of the most forceful and enduring statements of Black feminist thought to come out of the nineteenth century."

"It is not the intelligent woman v. the ignorant woman; nor the white woman v. the black, the brown, and the red, it is not even the cause of woman v. man. Nay, tis woman's strongest vindication for speaking that the world needs to hear her voice."
